synopsis:

The state of our world demands the question: Is God really in control? Look around. There is war, rioting, destruction, and brokenness. So much has gone wrong, and things seem to be getting worse, not better. How can a good God allow all of this pain?

While the evil of the world causes some to question the existence or character of God, C.S. Lewis argued that it ought to show us that mankind is on the wrong path and in need of a redeeming God.

discussion questions:

- Conventional thinking holds that mankind is evolving and growing more civilized, yet a glimpse at the newspaper tells a different story. What are some possible explanations for this?
- What is the role of followers of Christ amid war, injustice, and suffering?
- What promises from Scripture can we cling to in the midst of chaos?
